THE DOGMA OF THE REAL PRESENCE IN THE MOST BLESSED EUCHARIST

SAYS ST. AMBROSE: "You say, perhaps 'this bread is no other than what is used for common food.' True. Before consecration it is bread; but no sooner are the words of consecration pronounced than from bread it becomes THE FLESH OF CHRIST."

SAYS ST. AUGUSTINE: "We faithfully confess that before consecration it is bread and wine, the product of nature; but after consecration it is the BODY AND BLOOD OF CHRIST, consecrated by the blessing."

TRANSUBSTANTIATION - - - The admirable change from the bread into the Body of Christ is called THE TRANSUBSTANTIATION. Since natural changes are rightly called transformations, because they involve a change of form; so likewise our predecessors in the faith wisely and appropriately introduced the term TRANSUBSTANTIATION, in order to signify that in the Sacrament of the Eucharist the WHOLE substance of one thing passes into the WHOLE substance of another. (Council of Trent Catechism)

(St. Matthew, Chap.26)
