THE TWENTIETH SUNDAY AFTER PENTECOST
 THE FEAST OF CHRIST THE KING *****
 October 25, 1987 - - White

Weekly Bulletin # 53

Jesus comes to us in everything that tends to mortify our self-love and our pride: - - in everything that tends to prevent the development of our interior life, our growth in the vision and in the love of God. He manifests Himself to the religious in the uncongenial task, the irritating opposition, and in the uncouth companion. He manifests Himself to those not of religious lives in monasteries or convents in the very same manner. He manifests Himself in all the multiple disabilities, annoyances, and inconveniences arising for us from the failure or imperfection of creatures. But at every conjuncture God wishes us to discover Himself, however disconcerting be the guise in which He comes. It is not Easy! - - - It requires a very strong faith to see Him in the long, dull sequence of sometimes squalid, obscure and often pointless miseries that CONDITION our daily lot. Those who do not have faith suffer much more than those who enjoy the protection of Faith.
