

IN CONCEPTIONE IMMACULATA

December 8

Christmas

The people of the world — the people who ramble about the scrambles of the world — have lost sight of the meaning of the Incarnation as the single and central event of the Christmas celebration. For what reason, then, do we gather together to celebrate at all on Christmas Day, in fact, if not God's birth in space and time, and the eternal generation of that same God, and the involvement of the whole of humanity in these fundamental events?
