The way to capture the non-traditional mind or the unbelieving mind is not by overpowering arguments that shatter all objections, nor by devastating logic that demolishes the citadels of error! Neither are spectacular debates, where opponent thunders at opponent with computer powered scholarship, of any benefit to one whose simple faith finds no nourishment from all such sterile exercises. The simple and charitable exposition of truth and a humble presentation of it are the main ingredients that will help one become a saint, and will more than likely lead the uncertain mind gently to the higher levels of holiness. Then will the unbelieving mind be gradually led to ask questions about man's purpose here on earth.
